We find no fault with the editor of the Begister because he is from another state, and he knows it. We are a democrat and consequently not a Knownothing—we leave that abomination to Eugene Lawrence, the American Alliance and the radical state of Vermont. What we did find fault with him for in that connection was that when he first arrived here, a stranger to the soil and people, he approved and endorsed the disfranchisement iniquity, which took from the best people of this county—the people who had been its pioneers—the right to manage their own public affairs. The editor of that paper seems to be an adept at telling just as much of a story as suits his purpose and no more; his answers are consequently no answers.
